

In Loving Memory

From All Who Gather Today

We come together today from different places in her life—some held her close,
some knew her in passing,
all touched in some way by the years she spent among us.

Each of us carries
our own memories of her:
a conversation,
a kindness,
a moment shared,
or simply the quiet familiarity of seeing her at family gatherings.

Though our connections differed, we stand united in respect—for her life,
for the people she loved,
and for the mark she leaves on this family and this community.

Today, we honour her journey, and we offer our thoughts and comfort to those who feel her absence most deeply.

May her memory bring peace, and may we carry forward the best of what she gave in the ways we each remember her.
